

SID

The snow white damask ensigns are display'd,
And glittering falcons on the sideboard laid.
The shining sideboard, and the burnish'd plate,
Let other ministers, great Anne, require.
Scipio Africanus brought from Carthage to Rome, in silver vessels, to the value of 11956*l.* 15*s.* 9*d.* a quantity exceeded afterwards by the sideboards of many private tables.

SIDEROX, n. f. [side and box.] Seat for the ladies on the side of the theatre.

Why round our coaches crowd the white-glovd beaus?
Why bows the sidebox from its inmost rows?

SIDDELY, n. f. An insect.
From a rough whitish maggot, in the intestine rectum of horses, the sidefly proceeds.

To SIDLE, v. n. [from side.] To go with the body the narrowest way.

The chaffering with dissenters is but like opening a few wickets, and leaving them no more than one can get in at a time, and that not without stooping and sidling, and squeezing his body.

I passed very gently and sidling through the two principal streets.

A fellow nailed up maps in a gentleman's closet, some sidling, and others upside down, the better to adjust them to the pannels.

SIDELONG, adj. [side and long.] Lateral; oblique; not in front; not direct.

She darted from her eyes a sidelong glance,
Just as the spoke, and, like her words, it flew;
Seem'd not to beg what she then bid me do.

The deadly wound is in thy soul:
When thou a tempting harlot do'st behold,
And when the casts on thee a sidelong glance,
Then try thy heart, and tell me if it dance?

The reason of the planets motions in curve lines is the attraction of the sun, and an oblique or sidelong impulse.

The kids snatch'd hasty from the sidelong maid.

SIDELONG, adv.
1. Laterally; obliquely; not in pursuit; not in opposition.
As if on earth

Winds under ground, or waters, forcing way,
Sidelong had push'd a mountain from his seat,
Half sunk with all his pines.

As a lion, bounding in his way,
With force augmented bears against his prey,
Sidelong to seize.

2. On the side.
If it prove too wet, lay your pots sidelong; but shade those which blow from the afternoon sun.

SIDERAL, n. f. See CIDER.
SIDERAL, adj. [from sidus, Latin.] Starry; astral.

These changes in the heav'ns, though slow, produc'd
Like change on sea, and land; sidereal blast,
Vapour and mist, and exhalation hot,
Corrupt and pestilent!

The muck gives
Sure hopes of racy wine, and in its youth,
Its tender nonage, loads the spreading boughs
With large and juicy offsprings, that defies
The vernal nippings and cold sidereal blasts.

SIDERATED, adj. [from sideratus, Latin.] Blasted; planet struck.

Parts cauterized, gangrenated, siderated, and mortified, become black; the radical moisture, or vital sulphur, suffering an extinction.

SIDERATION, n. f. [sideration, French; sideratio, Latin.]
A sudden mortification, or, as the common people call it, a blast; or a sudden deprivation of sense, as in an apoplexy.

The contagious vapour of the very eggs produce a mortification or sideration in the parts of plants on which they are laid.

SIDESADDLE, n. f. [side and saddle.] A woman's seat on horseback.

SIDESMAN, n. f. [side and man.] An assistant to the church-warden.

A gift of such goods, made by them with the consent of the sidefmen or vestry, is void.

SIDWAYS, adv. [from side and way, or wise.] Laterally;
SIDWISE, adv. on one side.

The fair blossom hangs the head
Sideways, as on a dying bed;
And those pearls of dew the wears,
Prove to be prefiging tears.

If in the third experiment the image of the sun should be drawn out into an oblong form, either by a dilatation of every ray, or by any other casual inequality of the refractions, the
same oblong image would, by a second refraction made side-
ways, be drawn out as much in breadth by the like dilatation of the rays, or other casual inequality of the refraction side-
ways.

SIDWAYS, adv. [from side and way, or wise.] Laterally;
SIDWISE, adv. on one side.

The fair blossom hangs the head
Sideways, as on a dying bed;
And those pearls of dew the wears,
Prove to be prefiging tears.

If in the third experiment the image of the sun should be drawn out into an oblong form, either by a dilatation of every
ray, or by any other casual inequality of the refractions, the
same oblong image would, by a second refraction made side-
ways, be drawn out as much in breadth by the like dilatation of the rays, or other casual inequality of the refraction side-
ways.

SIDWAYS, adv. [from side and way, or wise.] Laterally;
SIDWISE, adv. on one side.

The fair blossom hangs the head
Sideways, as on a dying bed;
And those pearls of dew the wears,
Prove to be prefiging tears.

If in the third experiment the image of the sun should be drawn out into an oblong form, either by a dilatation of every
ray, or by any other casual inequality of the refractions, the
same oblong image would, by a second refraction made side-
ways, be drawn out as much in breadth by the like dilatation of the rays, or other casual inequality of the refraction side-
ways.

SIDWAYS, adv. [from side and way, or wise.] Laterally;
SIDWISE, adv. on one side.

The fair blossom hangs the head
Sideways, as on a dying bed;
And those pearls of dew the wears,
Prove to be prefiging tears.

If in the third experiment the image of the sun should be drawn out into an oblong form, either by a dilatation of every
ray, or by any other casual inequality of the refractions, the
same oblong image would, by a second refraction made side-
ways, be drawn out as much in breadth by the like dilatation of the rays, or other casual inequality of the refraction side-
ways.

SIDWAYS, adv. [from side and way, or wise.] Laterally;
SIDWISE, adv. on one side.

The fair blossom hangs the head
Sideways, as on a dying bed;
And those pearls of dew the wears,
Prove to be prefiging tears.

If in the third experiment the image of the sun should be drawn out into an oblong form, either by a dilatation of every
ray, or by any other casual inequality of the refractions, the
same oblong image would, by a second refraction made side-
ways, be drawn out as much in breadth by the like dilatation of the rays, or other casual inequality of the refraction side-
ways.

SIDWAYS, adv. [from side and way, or wise.] Laterally;
SIDWISE, adv. on one side.

The fair blossom hangs the head
Sideways, as on a dying bed;
And those pearls of dew the wears,
Prove to be prefiging tears.

If in the third experiment the image of the sun should be drawn out into an oblong form, either by a dilatation of every
ray, or by any other casual inequality of the refractions, the
same oblong image would, by a second refraction made side-
ways, be drawn out as much in breadth by the like dilatation of the rays, or other casual inequality of the refraction side- ways.

SIG

SIGNE, n. f. [siège, French.]

1. The act of besetting a fortified place; a league.
Our cattle's strength

Will laugh a siège to scorn: here let them lie,
Till famine eat them up.

It seem'd, by the manner of their proceeding, that the Turks purpos'd rather by long siège than by assault to take the town.

The more I feel pleasures about me, so much more I feel Torment within me, as from the hateful siège
Of contraries.

2. Any continued endeavour to gain possession.
Beat away the busy meddling fiend,

That lays strong siège unto this wretch's soul,
And from his bosom purge this black despair.

Give me so much of your time, in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable siège to the honesty of Ford's wife.

3. [Siege, French.] Seat; throne. Obsolete.
Drawing to him the eyes of all around,

From lofty siège began these words aloud to found.

4. Place; class; rank. Obsolete.
I fetch my life and being
From men of royal siège.

5. [Siege, French.] Stool.
It entereth not the veins, but taketh leave of the permeant parts, as the mouths of the mefaraicks, and accompanieth the inconvertible portion unto the siège.

6. [Siege, French.] To besiege.
A word not now in use.

Him he had long oppress'd with tort,
And fast imprison'd in sieged fort.

7. [Siege, French.] Hair or lawn strained upon a hoop, by which flower is separated from bran, or fine powder from coarse; a boulder; a searce.

Thy counsel
Falls now into my ears as profuseless

As water in a siège.
In a siège I'll thither sail,
And like a rat without a tail,
I'll do—I'll do—I'll do.

An innocent found a siège, and presently fell to dropping the holes.

If life sink through you like a leaky siège,
Accuse yourself you liv'd not while you might.

8. [Siege, French.] To separate by a sieve.
In the sifting of such favour all that came out could not be expected to be pure meal, but must have a mixture of padar and bran.

9. To separate; to part.
When yellow sands are sifted from below,
The glittering billows give a golden flow.

10. To examine; to try.
We have sifted your objections against those pre-eminences royal.

11. All which the wit of Calvin could from thence draw, by sifting the very utmost sentence and syllable, is no more than that certain speeches seem to intimate, that all Christian churches ought to have their elderships.

12. I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted,
The king thy sovereign is not quite exempt

From envious malice of thy swelling heart.

13. As near as I could sift him on that argument.
Opportunity I here have had

To try thee, sift thee, and confels have found thee

Proof against all temptation as a rock

Of adamant.

14. One would think, that every member who embraces with vehemence the principles of either of these parties, had thoroughly sifted and examined them, and was secretly convinced of their preference to those he rejects.

15. [Sift, French.] He who sifts.
SIG was used by the Saxons for victory: Sigbert, famous for victory; Sigward, victorious preserver; Sigard, conquering temper: and almost in the same sense are Nicoles, Nicomya- chus, Nicander, Victor, Victorinus, Vincencius, &c.

16. [Sig, French.] To emit the breath audibly, as in grief.
I lov'd the maid I married; never man
Sigh'd truer breath.

17. To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
To Christian intercessors.

18. He sigh'd deeply in his spirit, and faith, why doth this generation seek after a sign?

19. For the oppression of the poor, for the sighing of the needy will I arise.

20. I lov'd the maid I married; never man
Sigh'd truer breath.

21. To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
To Christian intercessors.

22. He sigh'd deeply in his spirit, and faith, why doth this generation seek after a sign?

23. For the oppression of the poor, for the sighing of the needy will I arise.

24. I lov'd the maid I married; never man
Sigh'd truer breath.

25. To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
To Christian intercessors.

26. He sigh'd deeply in his spirit, and faith, why doth this generation seek after a sign?

27. For the oppression of the poor, for the sighing of the needy will I arise.

28. I lov'd the maid I married; never man
Sigh'd truer breath.

29. To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
To Christian intercessors.

30. He sigh'd deeply in his spirit, and faith, why doth this generation seek after a sign?

31. For the oppression of the poor, for the sighing of the needy
will I arise.

32. I lov'd the maid I married; never man
Sigh'd truer breath.

33. To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
To Christian intercessors.

SIG

Happier he,
Who seeks not pleasure through necessity,
Than such as once on slippery thrones were plac'd,
And chafing, sig to think themselves are chas'd.

The nymph too longs to be alone;
Leaves all the swains, and sigs for one.

Thus sig he away the melancholy night.

To SIGH, v. a. To lament; to mourn. Not in use.
Ages to come, and men unborn,
Shall bless her name, and sig her fate.

SIGH, n. f. [from the verb.] A violent and audible emission of the breath which has been long retained, as in sadness.

Full often has my heart swollen with keeping my sighs imprisoned; full often have the tears I drove back from mine eyes, turned back to drown my heart.

Love is a smoke rais'd with the fume of sighs;
Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in lovers eyes.

What a sig is there! The heart is sorely charg'd.
Laughing, if loud, ends in a deep sig; and all pleasures have a sting in the tail, though they carry beauty on the face.

In Venus' temple, on the sides were seen Issuing sighs, that smok'd along the wall.

SIGHT, n. f. [German, Sicht; Dutch, gezicht.]
1. Perception by the eye; the sense of seeing.

If bees go forth right to a place, they must needs have sight.

O loss of sight, of thee I most complain!
Blind among enemies, O worse than chains,
Dungeon or beggary, decrepit age!

Things invisible to mortal sight.
'Tis still the same, although their airy shape
All but a quick poetick sight escape.

My eyes are somewhat dimly grown;
For nature, always in the right,
To your decays adapts my sight.

2. Open view; a situation in which nothing obstructs the eye.
Undaunted Hotspur
Brings on his army, eager unto sight,
And plac'd the same before the king in sight.

Æneas cast his wond'ring eyes around,
And all the Tyrrhene army had in sight,
Stretch'd on the spacious plain from left to right.

I met Brutus in a mortal sight;
He's dipt for certain, and plays least in sight.

3. Act of seeing or beholding.
Nine things to sight required are;
The pow'r to see, the light, the visible thing,
Being not too small, too thin, too high, too far,
Clear space and time, the form distinct to bring.

4. Notice; knowledge.
It was writ as a private letter to a person of piety, upon an assurance that it should never come to any one's sight but her own.

5. Eye; instrument of seeing.
From the depth of hell they lift their sights,
And at a distance see superior light.

6. Aperture pervious to the eye, or other point fixed to guide the eye; as, the sights of a quadrant.

7. Spectacle; show; thing wonderful to be seen.
Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel.

8. Thus are my eyes still captive to one sight;
Thus all my thoughts are slaves to one thought still.

9. Them seem'd they never saw a sight so fair
Of fowls so lovely, that they fure did deem Them heavenly born.

10. Not an eye
But is a weary of thy common sight,
Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more.

11. I took a felucca at Naples to carry me to Rome, that I might not run over the same sights a second time.

12. Though gods assembled grace his tow'ring height,
Than what more humble mountains offer here,
Where, in their blessings, all those gods appear.

13. Before you pass th' imaginary sights
Of lords and earls, and dukes and garter'd knights,
While the spread fan o'erhades your closing eyes,
Then give one sight, and all the vision flies.

14. The fire devour'd two hundred and fifty men, and they became a sign.

15. A constellation in the zodiac.
There stay until the twelve celestial signs
Have brought about their annual reckoning.

16. Now did the sign reign, and the constellation was com-under which Perkin should appear.

17. After ev'ry foe subdu'd, the sun
Thrice through the signs his annual race shall run.

18. Note of resemblance.
7. Ensign.

The ensign of Messiah blaz'd,
Aloft by angels borne, his sign in heaven.

8. Typical representation; symbol.
The holy symbols or signs are not barely significative; but what they represent is as certainly delivered to us as the symbols themselves.

9. A subscription of one's name: as, a sign manual.
To SIGN, v. a. [signo, Latin.]

1. To mark.
You sign your place and calling in full seeming
With meekness and humility; but your heart
Is cramm'd with arrogance.

2. [Signer, French.] To ratify by hand or seal.
Be pleas'd to sign these papers: they are all
Of great concern!

3. To betoken; to signify; to represent typically.
The sacraments and symbols are just such as they seem;
but because they are made to be signs of a secret mystery, they receive the names of what themselves do sign.

SIGNAL, n. f. [signal, French; señale, Spanish.] Notice given by a sign; a sign that gives notice.

The

The

The

The

The

The

The

The